HyperMotion, as it is known, is not new, but it has never been fully implemented in a football title before. EA Sports made “one out of every three player actions,” said DeJue Stamps, gameplay playability director for FIFA, “have direct motion capture data and physics.” Previously, he added, “the most you got was animation and animations had to be fitted into the over 30 matches we’ve done before.” This includes implementing “a tool that allowed us to sample the motion capture data,” using any player caught within the first five minutes of an FUT match. “The real challenge we found,” Stamps said, “is when you come out of animation, you want to ensure the player moves in a way that feels natural and believable.” “It’s kind of weird,” Stamps added, “when you look at the player’s body language, the way he’s stretching the entire time. We capture motion like this in the game, and we can create a simulation to record how he would move if he was actually running, and we move him in that direction.” Both Stamps and gameplay producer Jake Rubin said that the team had been testing the new technology since the start of development last year, which they said had provided a solid foundation. Working out how to fuse the simulation data into the game’s presentation was one of the key features the developers needed to solve, they said. “We started collecting data during the coaching process,” Stamps said. “We have players move in motion capture suits, and we’re able to collect a lot of data around what they do. The player goes to the ground, and we’re able to capture that as a collision.” “We can then define an entire animation, not just one position,” Stamps added. “It’s something that’s never been done before.” The idea of collecting this data from players and programming it into the game is one that EA Sports has dabbled with in the past – including with the popular FIFA Street series, which used its Street Motion technology to capture players in motion and simulate the way they would move.

Features Key:

- FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay.
- The game is built for console and mobile, taking advantage of all the power and flexibility of handheld devices.
- A revolution in Freekick mode gives you five new creative techniques to choose from while curling the ball.
- The Touch of Gods brings out the best and smoothest touch shots, while combined Ultimate Team strategies give you the tools to create your perfect team.

Key game modes:

FIFA 22 introduces three new game modes in Career Mode:

- FUTCar: Discover the genius of FUTCar, and see some of the best stadiums and kits in the game - created in consultation with the World’s best football equipment suppliers.
- FUTClassic: Take the reigns of a club as they train, prepare for an away game, and face the ultimate pressure ahead of the Championship playoffs.

All the excitement, atmosphere and drama of football come to life like never before through authentic and dynamic gameplay. Create Your Player and live out your Dreams. Developed by the creators of FIFA 19. FIFA is football on a larger scale. It’s your responsibility as a player to make sure it becomes your future. Your future. Gameplay advances: Thanks to all the feedback from fans, clubs and our PES Pro Clubs members, we have a more authentic and dynamic FIFA experience than ever before. Improved iteration speed: Tweaks and adjustments have been made to the game’s AI to make it easier for players to build-up their game. More live shots and goalkeepers helps to speed up play and improve match quality. More attacking opportunities: The game has been made even more tactical, with more emphasis being placed on the midfield, to give players more attacking opportunities. When attacking from close range, goalkeepers have more chance to make saves. The offside system has been refined and refocused: When a defender is offside during an attack, the defender receives a yellow card and will be marked by the referee during a subsequent free kick. This works to keep players onside by forcing defenders to position themselves closer to the player who’s receiving the ball. Team AI & tactics: Teams will make more forward runs and advanced runs to open up passing lanes and get into better positions for the next pass. Having multiple attackers in one space can help to open up passing lanes or free your forward onside when they
