Q: AWS S3 Etag Versioning I'm using a PHP library to upload files to AWS, one of the attributes is called Etag. When I upload the same file in two different folders using the same PHP library, I get different ETags. One of the ETags is recorded by the PHP library in the folder where the file was uploaded. The other ETag is recorded by the PHP library in the second folder. The question is how does the PHP library know when to copy the file? Is there any way for the PHP library to upload the same file again without the second ETag?

A: I don't think there is a way. At least not in your PHP library. The Etag applies to a particular object, which includes the object you are writing to. The object you are writing to (in this case) is a file, and the Etag is associated with that file. So the way that Etag works is seems Different methods of recording The application comes with three pre-defined recording modes: full screen, rectangle and auto pan. Additionally, there's a special cursor to define the window you wish to record, with the possibility to resize the area and to move it anywhere on the screen. Choose video and audio quality configurations Super Screen Recorder can record in AVI and WMV formats with up to 30 FPS. In addition to that, the program can record audio as well, with dedicated tools to select the audio device, input and format. Of course, two special fields allow you to select the video and audio compressor for the best possible quality. Insert user-defined watermarks Aside from the fact that the program can capture the cursor and remains minimized while recording, there is also a powerful utility for adding a watermark over the recorded video. This separate feature is fully customizable; you can use a text and an image as a watermark, yet you are also allowed to adjust opacity, font, size, position, frame and colors. Tweak general parameters The settings menu is just minimal and includes only a bunch of options, yet you may have a look in the hotkey manager that enables you to define shortcuts for the main tools, such as recording, start and stop auto pan and snapshot. Last but not least, Super Screen Recorder boasts a scheduler to automatically start or stop recordings at a user-defined time. A last evaluation While the video quality is great, not the same thing can be said about the audio side of the recording. Everything sounds terrible and you may have to spend some time setting up the audio device if you really want to get a decent result. Taking all of this into consideration, Super Screen Recorder is quite handy when trying to record screen activity, and the fact that it boasts hotkey support makes it very easy to use.
