Discussion =====

The American Cancer Society in the early 1990's estimated that at least 80% of all childhood cancers were caused by genetic diseases, and that for each childhood cancer, one specific syndrome was responsible for up to 90% of the cases \[\[B1]\]. Owing to advances in cancer therapy, however, more and more children with cancer are surviving. Thus it is of paramount importance to try to preserve the potential benefits of previous cancer therapy. Pediatric oncology clinicians should strive to minimize long term toxic effects, especially in terms of late therapy-related effects. The ideal would be that the continuation of chemotherapy would not be harmful in terms of late effects as far as the side effects and toxicity.

Unfortunately, it is impossible to avoid chemotherapy-related late adverse effects. These effects usually appear a few months to more than 10 years after the end of treatment. As it has already been mentioned, the most common long term side effect is cardiotoxicity, followed by early gonadal failure, and pulmonary fibrosis \[[@B2] c6a93da74d
